Preface

This publication is jointly sponsored by three new and vigorous Australian associations concerned, each in its distinctive way, with the Study of Religion: The Australian and New Zealand Society for Theological Studies (ANZSTS), The Australian Association for the Study of Religions (AASR) and The Australian and New Zealand Association of Theological Schools (ANZATS).

Papers by distinguished scholars and reports resulting from intensive workshops on "the Australian context" make up the twelve chapters in this book. All were presented at the ANZSTS/ANZATS joint Annual Conference at La Trobe University, Melbourne, in August, 1978. Their final appearance in book form owes much to the initiative of Dr. Douglas Fullerton, Secretary of ANZATS.

The AASR was also holding its Annual National Conference during the same week and in the same College quarters. This meant jointly sponsored major speakers, dual or triple registrations, and daily vigorous interaction among Conference delegates. The result was a stimulating encounter among representatives of various disciplines and religious traditions.

Our three Associations are delighted to co-sponsor this volume. It affords a glimpse of the vitality of one dimension of one of the world's great religious movements. Here Christian thinkers seek to understand in depth their specific contemporary context in order the better to express therein and thereto the heart, mind, soul and strength of their tradition.
