

Notes on Contributors

Will Domvo is a graduate researcher in higher education policy at the University of Melbourne and a professional staff at RMIT University. He is the co-chair of the Graduate Student Advisory Committee at the Melbourne Graduate School of Education. His current research focuses on understanding the barriers refugees face when trying to access higher education in Europe.

Callum Innes is a graduate of the University of Bristol, UK with a degree in Economics and Politics. He has recently been with the Investment Group in the UK and is currently studying in preparation for graduate studies in politics. The current article draws on his honours work on regulation in international affairs, in particular in the European Union.

Mike Innes is currently an Adjunct Research Professor at the University of South Australia with the Jean Monnet Centre of Excellence. He is a social psychologist with interests in the psychology of social influence, persuasion, group dynamics and the effects of technological change. He is researching the influence of artificial intelligence on the practice of professional psychologists. He has held chairs in psychology at the University of Adelaide, James Cook University and Murdoch University and visiting chairs at the Universities of Michigan and Barcelona. He is a Fellow of the Academy of the Social Sciences in Australia the British and the Australian Psychological Societies and the Society of Experimental Social Psychology. He has been a President of the Society of Australasian Social Psychologists.

Abigail Johnson is an economics graduate from the University of Canterbury and a member of the National Centre for Research on Europe in New Zealand. Her research interests include trade liberalisation and the role of the EU in the development of the South Pacific.

Ludovica Marchi (pen name of Ludovica Marchi Balossi Restelli) (PhD, University of Reading, UK) (ORCID-ID 0000-0002-7371-6128), Visiting Fellow at the Centre for International Studies, London School of Economics and Political Science, London, UK, published articles in peer-reviewed journals, which include, among others, US-China Law Review, Asia-Pacific Journal of EU Studies, Australian and New Zealand Journal of European Studies, European Security, Journal of European Integration History, and European Politics and Society. She visited universities in Seoul, Tokyo, Macau, Taipei, Shanghai, Singapore, and Cambridge (UK), where she discussed her research. She published four books, the last being (ed.) The European Union and Myanmar: Interactions via ASEAN (Routledge 2020).

Ben Morrison is Senior Lecturer in the Psychology at Macquarie University, teaching organisational psychology at graduate and undergraduate levels. He has a PhD from the University of Western Sydney. He leads a research group at Charles Sturt University examining the effects of algorithmic supplementation of human decision making. His previous research has spanned decision making and problem solving in sport, clinical decision making and in group performance.

Jessica Quirk holds a BA Business (Finance) from Swinburne University of Technology and BA (International Studies) (Honours) from Royal Melbourne Institute of Technology (RMIT). She is the Secretary of European Studies Association of Australia and New Zealand (ESAANZ) and has been a committee member since 2018. Her research interests lie in International Political Economy and Italian populism.

Mardi Sutherland has completed a Bachelor of Arts at the University of Melbourne, majoring in Politics & International Studies and French. She is now a Juris Doctor student with the Melbourne Law School. She has an interest in international law and hopes to one day study in Europe.

Zane Šime is an Affiliated Researcher at the Norwegian University of Science and Technology (NTNU) and an Academic Assistant at the College of Europe in Bruges, Department of EU International Relations and Diplomacy Studies. She has completed research at the United Nations University Institute on Comparative Regional Integration Studies (UNU-CRIS) and the Academy of the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE). She is a graduate of KU Leuven and the University of Latvia. Zane was a member of the first cohort of the Emerging Urban Leaders programme of the Salzburg Global Seminar. Her previous work experience includes project implementation at the Secretariat of the Council of the Baltic Sea States and Latvian civil service. Zane focuses on EU science diplomacy. Among her research interests are the EU macro-regional governance and the EU-India educational diplomacy in the Asia-Europe Meeting (ASEM) context.

Charlotte Walker is currently in the final year of her Master's in European Studies at the University of Canterbury in New Zealand. Her thesis pertains to Spanish-language media coverage of domestic femicide cases in Spain during the COVID-19 pandemic. She is living and working in Spain and doing her degree by distance. In the future, she intends to apply for the Schwarzman Scholars programme in Beijing and eventually do a PhD in either European or Asian Studies.

Agata Wierzbowska Associate Professor at the Graduate School of Economics, Kobe University, Japan. She received an M.A. in Finance and Accounting from Warsaw School of Economics in 2011 and Ph.D. in Economics from Kobe University in 2015. Her research has mainly focused on empirical studies on monetary policy in the euro area and the condition of the banking sector in Europe.