

Notes on contributors

Riccardo Armillei completed a PhD in Social Sciences at Swinburne University and has over a decade of research experience. He is a qualitative researcher with expertise in participatory and mixed-methods research. His research interests lie at the intersection of transnational human mobility, contemporary debates about the effects and legacies of colonialism on policy-making, and theoretical and ideological approaches to cultural diversity and social justice. Riccardo has published three books and over 30 scientific papers. His experience spans the government, NGO, and academic sectors.

Leo Goedegebuure is a Honorary Professorial Fellow at the Centre for the Study of Higher Education. From 2005 to 2019, Leo was Director at the LH Martin Institute at The University of Melbourne. Leo's research interests are in the areas of governance and management, system dynamics, university-industry relationships, and institutional mergers. Leo has published widely on a broad range of topics including higher education policy, quality assessment, evaluation research, system dynamics, engineering education, institutional management and comparative research.

Maren Klein completed a PhD in Social Sciences at Swinburne University. She is a qualitative researcher with expertise in participatory and mixed-methods research. Her research interests include contemporary German politics, European Union politics, comparative politics, education and education governance, and language and culture. She has published on European Union politics and on tertiary education issues.

Bruno Mascitelli is a Honorary Professor at RMIT University and has been active in the European Studies environment for some time. An academic at Swinburne University and holder of a Jean Monnet Chair (2016-2019), Bruno was President of the European Union Studies Association of Australia and New Zealand from 2004 until 2021. He has published widely on European and Italian political economy.

Alyce Richards is the Local Development Strategy Project Manager of the Swifts Creek Future project. She has experience in agriculture and community engagement, and collaborative project work to drive economic growth.

Irimi Vasilakakos completed her Honours degree in International Studies at RMIT. Her research interests include sovereignty theory and legitimacy, state formation and supranational entities, comparative political systems, nationalism and conservatism in Europe and the United States, and judicial interpretation of US constitutional law.

Perparim (Rimi) Xhaferi completed a PhD in Social Sciences at the University of Sydney. He is an expert on the politics of ethnicity, race and national identity in the Western Balkan region. His thesis explored Albanian identity and engagement with the country's Ottoman heritage in the twenty-first century. His areas of interest include EU enlargement in the Western Balkans, nation-building theories, language and culture. He has published on European Union Enlargement, the Western Balkans, Ismail Kadare and Albanian identity.