The Australian Association for the Study of Religions is a professional organization with a membership of more than 350, made up of teachers, academics, students and others with knowledge and experience of religious traditions.

Many members also hold membership in other societies representing specific disciplines and cross-disciplinary fields. The AASR aims to function as a meeting place where the study of religion in its broadest dimensions may be fostered. It owes a considerable debt of gratitude to the Charles Strong Trust for financial support.

Membership confers participation in the AASR program which includes:

- Annual Conferences
- Access to AASR Publications (books and monographs)
- A.R.S. Review (articles, book reviews, news and notes on personnel, publications, seminars, conferences, course offerings, school and tertiary curricula).
- AASR Women and Religion Caucus
- Affiliation with the International Association for the History of Religions (IAHR)
- Strong ties with institutions in Melanesia and New Zealand.

The current editor of the A.R.S. REVIEW completes her two-year assignment with this issue, and I would like to thank all those AASR members who send in material and responded generously to invitations to contribute.

The initial design and format style of the REVIEW was the work of Vicki Hayes and her husband Charles, and the AASR will be always in debt to them for these distinctive features of our publication. Administrative, Clerical, Courier and Publications staff of the South Australian College of Advanced Education, in particular: Carl Dutton, Elaine Morphett, Tess Raggio, Chris Arvanitis and Maria Argitis, have also contributed immeasurably to the successful preparation and production of the REVIEW.

In future, the REVIEW will appear twice annually and the new editors will be Tricia Blombery and Philip Hughes, researchers and writers for the Christian Research Association. Vic Hayes, Editor of AASR Publications will continue to be Book Reviews Editor.

I wish to thank especially Margaret Snooks and the academic staff of the Division of Religious Studies at La Trobe University who generously shared their time and resources in the cause of completion of this issue.
