The Australian Association for the Study of Religions is a professional organization with a membership of more than 300, made up of teachers, academics, students and others with knowledge and experience of religious traditions.

Many members also hold membership in other societies representing specific disciplines and cross-disciplinary fields. The AASR aims to function as a meeting place where the study of religion in its broadest dimensions may be fostered. It owes a considerable debt of gratitude to the Charles Strong Trust for financial support.

Membership confers participation in the AASR program which includes:

- * Annual Conferences
- * Access to AASR Publications (books and monographs)
- * A.R.S. Review (articles, book reviews, news and notes on personnel, publications, seminars, conferences, course offerings, school and tertiary curricula).
- * AASR Women and Religion Caucus
- * Affiliation with the International Association for the History of Religions (IAHR)
- * Strong ties with institutions in Melanesia and New Zealand.

Editors' Note

We are delighted that our pleas in the last REVIEW were heeded and that several members have offered articles, reviews, leave reports and conference reports. In case you missed last time, some ways you can help are:

- reports of conferences you attend
- reports of study leave
- information of forth coming conferences, here and overseas
- outlines of new courses and curricula
- making sure your publishers send us review copies of your books.

The areas with the greatest need are the courses and curriculum section and conference and leave reports. Often in the state news we have mentions of new courses departments and scholars are presenting but unless I chase them up we don't have details. Without thwarting someone's creative genius, we could avoid re-inventing the wheel and further enrich the teaching of religion. It doesn't entail a specially prepared paper but merely forwarding the course outlines and reference guides you use in the university handbooks.

Similarly with leave reports. Most of you will be required to present some sort of summary for your department or university. Send these on to the REVIEW and they can form a basis for planning for colleagues as well as keeping other members informed of your current areas of research and scholarship.

MOST IMPORTANT!!! We guarantee reviews of all books produced by members. Make sure that your publisher has us on the list. We may not have a large circulation but, with our contacts in teaching departments and libraries both here and overseas, we do have buying power.

For the next issue we will look at ethics and religion or religious ethics or teaching ethics and values or any other variation you would like to make on the theme. Let Tricia know if you would like to contribute an article. Also if you have read any recent books in the area or attended any relevant seminars or conferences sent reports of those as well.

We look forward to seeing you at the conference in Adelaide. Thank you for your continued support.
