ċκ

From a dying orbit

a raised brow

A lunate gesture

a lawless star

flung

Along the incontinent scapes of night and the elemental absence of soul.

No longer adherent to the weighty doctrines, the penal certitudes and the aberrant cogs of a kata – strophic constellation.

But enthralled now to the way of the fall – the recapitulation the passage, the presage of loomed sinew and span, in the terrible poetics of the mawing womb.

John Nijjem