This Number of Religious Traditions covers the years 1984-1986 comprising Volumes 7-9 and brings it up-to-date.

The period has not been a happy one. Not only did we lose Ian Kesarcodi-Watson, my colleague and co-founder of this journal, but some members of our editorial board also passed away. These include eminent scholars like Professors A.L. Basham and P.C. Craigie, and most recently, Mircea Eliade. If, despite these setbacks, the journal continues to appear, it is due to the generous assistance the journal has received from several sources. Support from the Charles Strong Memorial Trust allowed work to commence on this volume. It has now been brought to successful fruition especially through the munificence of the James Macartney Hill Bequest, received through the Department of Religious Studies of the University of Sydney. We are deeply grateful for their help which now enables us to place this born-again journal in your hands.
