

SYDNEY STUDIES IN ENGLISH

DEPARTMENT OF ENGLISH
UNIVERSITY OF SYDNEY

Volume 37, 2011

BARRY SPURR: The Fame and Nurture of Poetry	1
JOHN ATTRIDGE: The Lesson of the Master: Learning and Cognition in What Maisie Knew	19
JENNIFER BECKETT: Bloody Sunday : National Trauma and National Cinema	44
PETER MARKS: Money, 'Money', Money : Cultural Transactions Between Philip Larkin and Martin Amis	71
WILL NOONAN: Reflecting Back, or What Can the French Tell the English About Humour?	92
JESSICA BROOKS: Ken Kesey, David Ireland and a Portrait of Australian Freedom	116

Editor: David Kelly

Sydney Studies in English is published annually, concentrating on criticism and scholarship in English literature, drama and cinema. It aims to provide a forum for critical, scholarly and applied theoretical analysis of text, and seeks to balance the complexities of the discipline with the need to remain accessible to the wide audience of teachers and students of English both inside and outside the university.

Submissions of articles should be made online at:
escholarship.library.usyd.edu.au/journals/index.php/SSE/about/submissions#onlineSubmissions

Each article will be read by at least two referees.

Sydney Studies in English is published in association with the Department of English, University of Sydney, NSW 2006, Australia. Visit the Department's homepage at: sydney.edu.au/arts/english/

ISSN: 0156-5419 (print)

ISSN: 1835-8071 (online)